Market Comment

Market is expected to react positively to the decision for the formation of a coalition government that will secure the disbursement of the 6th tranche of aid. At the same time, probabilities for the most adverse scenarios that the market had started to price in already seem to be declining for the moment. On the other hand, the period until February 19th might place the economy on a standstill while international attention will be gradually shifting towards Italy that is in a fragile economic condition.

In the Spotlight

Political Developments: Greek Prime Minister George Papandreou agreed to step down to allow the creation of a national unity government. Papandreou met with Antonis Samaras, leader of the main opposition party, and agreed to form a government to lead Greece "to elections immediately after the implementation of European Council decisions on October 26. Elections will be held after that with most probable date February 19, 2012.

Papandreou and Antonis Samaras, will meet today to decide who will head the new government (probably Mr. Papadimos former Vice President of ECB), with a separate meeting to discuss the timeframe and the government's mandate.

T-bills: The Hellenic Republic will auction 26-week treasury bills on November 8, with maturity 11 May 2012, according to the Public Debt Management Agency. The amount to be auctioned is €1,000 million, with settlement date November 11. The yield at the previous auction was 4.86%.

Macro: The Greek Treasury has received a heavy blow in October, as strikes and economic contraction nearly froze the tax revenue system. FinMin sources said that net revenues amounted to €4.2 billion, decreased by 7% compared with the corresponding last year. During the period January-October 2011, the Greece state raised a total amount of €39.17 billion, 4.4% lower than the corresponding period of 2010. Thus, the gap in state budget stands at €2.4 billion.

Ratings: Moody's cut Cyprus's rating to the lowest investment grade on expectations the nation will be forced to support its banking system and seek emergency funding.

Marfin Bank: Bank announced that Mr. Andreas Vgenopoulos resigned as Non Executive Chairman and Member of the Board of Directors of the Bank. The Board of Directors elected as its new Non Executive Chairman Mr. Constantinos Mylonas.

Watch for: European finance ministers meet in Brussels
Political leaders meeting with Democracy President scheduled for today is cancelled.
